Cherubim has been conjuring up a dreamy, improvisational blend of electro soul, pop, and jazz since December 2015. Led through lush landscapes of old soul melodies by vocalist/instrumentalist Alisha Roney and inflected with the experimental underpinnings of Joey Ziegler on drums and synth, Cherubim's performance leaves crowds breathless, entranced, and exultant.

Based in Brooklyn, the project has quickly found it's footing in premier music venues across the city (Le Poisson Rouge, Gramercy Theatre, Mercury Lounge). They have been steadily garnering attention in cultural publications and forums (Gothamist, Artsy Magazine, The Deli Magazine, Portland Radio Project 99.1 FM, Mashable "Women Who Rock"), and are a regularly-featured act in the Sofar Sounds circuit both locally and internationally.

"Alisha Roney's ethereal voice...a multi-octave instrument that moves freely between husky alto and catastriphic soprano, and trancending easy classification." - CMJ 2015

"Roney's hypnotizing voice...with Ziegler's electronic crescendo, create a multi-layer, magnetic soundscape with their debut EP." -50third and 3rd 2017

"Roney's subversice voice...she passionately pulls from the tips of her toes."
-Artsy Magazine 2016

Alisha's voice suspends between soul, jazz and pop, with perfect, beautiful intonation, capable of moving from past to present." -Triste Sunset 2016

"Beauty for Ashes...is a powerful handshake as far as musical introductions go." -The Deli Magazine 2015
